Throughout the house are custom designs by Claves, including cushions, blinds, carpets, sofas, and a three-piece angular dining table in the dining room. The team relied on a bevy of local artists and skilled artisans, who lent their talents to the project, among them Sophie Toporkoff of Atelier Toporkoff (previously of Hermès and Maison Margiela), for her delicate stained-glass panels; Galatee Martin, who painted a fresco in the entry alcove depicting Eloi de la Plume, a mythical muse of the house; and Montmartre-based artist Gaultier Rimbault, who contributed a mirror painting for the primary bedroom.
